Our identity

How we act and interact with our stakeholders

The helper

We have a clear and serious voice as a public authority, while being a friendly guide and helper. We believe that most people want to comply with the rules, and we will facilitate this.

Our roles

We fulfil our mission for society by being both a directorate and an official control authority. When interacting with our users, we have three main roles.

Supervisor and helper Executive officer Emergency responder

Our ambitions

The long-term ambitions we have set to deliver on our mission

Easier to do right

We help businesses and citizens to do the right thing and comply with the rules. We thus make it easier to produce and sell safe food and to treat animals well.

Knowledge-based and targeted

We know our stakeholders and we work in a data-driven way. This makes our efforts more knowledge-based and targeted.

One team

We have a creative and learning culture and we collaborate with industry and public actors. This is how we become one team that works well together.

Our values

Our promises to users and stakeholders, and how we want to be perceived

Clear

We communicate clearly, unambiguously and comprehensibly. We work together as a coordinated supervisory body and have a common understanding of our mission, so that our users see us as predictable. We have a clear and proactive voice in the media and we are relevant in the public debate.

Open

We meet our users with an open mind and acknowledge their knowledge and experience. We are curious about societal developments and we collaborate with other agencies to develop the best possible services for our users. We facilitate transparency in what we do and how we work.

Solution-orientated

We provide understandable rules, practical solutions, good guidance and purpose-oriented supervision. We are proactive and we invite our users to engage in dialogue and participation when we develop services and regulations. We give people the answers they need before they need them.

Competent

We have a good understanding of users' needs and we take their perspective when developing rules and services. Everything we do must be based on up-to-date knowledge and practical expertise, in collaboration with industry and knowledge support.
